will for the purposes of the historiographer who desires to understand the rise of the imperial power of China from its foundation by the great T'sin Shihwaugti, be of still greater interest. One of the great movements of Asiatic history, whose echoes reached as far as Imperial Rime, had its headquarters in these regions—the struggle for mastery between the Hiung Nu and the Hans, which long remained undecided; and it is therefore of consequence that Dr. Stein should start provided with the latest than that he should be left of his own monarchs seem to have been kept in gool devices to struggle out of the Sirbonian bog order, but under the later menarchs of the in which the subject has been left through dynasty, who had lost the energy of their the errors of Deguianes, and his modern predecessors these works were gradually of the eighteenth century-Deguignes was a fair Oriental scholar, but he seems to have known little Chinese, and to have been entirely dependent on second hand translations of the Wanhien Kungmu, itself a CO., réchaussée with no critical noumen of older works of very different authority. Decuienes' History of the Huns may be best described as a work of the same age and similar authority with ROLLIN's "Ancient History," and it would be as profitable to go to the latter for a history of ancient Egypt or Babylon as to Dequienes for the anc ent history of Central Asia. Our modera Chinese scholars are as deficient in critical judgment as their predecessors of the eighteenth century, and have been content | had up to his day survived, and the lind to copy their blunders, without, of course, deprived of its inhabitants, and with its the same excuse; and so Dr. Stein, not irrigation works destrayed, has in the latter himself a professing Chinese student, has been led into the error of confounding irreclaimable desert, never more to be re-Hunni with Hinng Nu. The error, which amounts to an entire falsification of the ethnographic history of Asia, as well as dislocating the later history of the Roman Empire, is of importance, the more CONSISTENT EXCELENCE especially that neither ethnographically nor philologically is there any connection between the two peoples, who are in both respects as far apart as the poles. KLAPROTH a century ago shattered Deguiones' arguments, but the modern sinologist still, from ignorance or malice prepense, elects to repeat the error.

As a fact, while the swarthy low statured dark eyed Hunn described by Ammianus MARCELLINUS is an unmistakeable Ogauz, all the descriptions we possess from Chinese sources lead to the conclusion that the Hiung Nu there figured belonged ra her to the blond type; was tall, fair complexioned, and possessed that generosity of character which has at all times marked the Turk in contrast with the Oghuz type. The Hiung Nu was, in fact, the true forerunner of the modern Osmanli in feature as in disposition; and the remains of his speech preserved for us by Sanna Teinn are distinctly of the Osmanli type. The true descendants of the Hiung Nu were in fact the Tughul of the sixth century and the Seljuk of the tenth, and through the latter the modern Osmanli. The Hunn of Ammianus who so nearly brought the early Byzantine Empire to destruct on, and who disturbed the whole of Europe till conquered on the field of Chal no. finds his closest modern representative in the swarthy Vogul of the Urals.

This confusion of Turk and Oghuz is not, however, the only error into which Dr. Stein has been led by his false guides in Correspondents must forward their names and ad- his short description of this Gobi land. Equally in error, though the consequences are of less importance, are the supposed identification of Charkhlik and Leolan. Leolan, or as it was apparently subsequently called, Shen-s'ten, the Nafopu, i.e. Navapur or Newtown of the monk Yuen Chwang was undoubted y the modern Cherchen. Originally the capital of the old Arjuna tribes of Eastern Turkest in, its history is very instructive, and its capture formed one of the main achievements of the mythical Nauwang in the story of the Great Migration. Charkatak on the other hand represents the site of the mythical K'i the first home of the Cheos who founded the first kingdom in northern China, the forerunner of the subsequent Empire. It is in fact the Küsse or Ch'esse of the T'sien Han Shu, when it constituted a separate kingdom. As Dr. Stein rightly tells us, the Lake Lop was in those early days far more extensive than at present, and so the road to DR. AUBEL STEIN has proved himself a Shen-shen had to hug the northern slopes of model explorer, and the results that he has the modern Altyn Tagh, and passed through already attained in the till lately mysterious | the land of Küsse, in mordern times known regions of Central Asia lying immediately as Gash. This territory in the time of the west of China afford an indication of what | early Hans was far more fer ile and better we may expect regarding the earlier history | watered than in modern times, and we of Asiatic civilisation when his explorations find the Emperor Wu offering it as come to be still further extended. Lately he | pasture land to the Wusuns, who, however, has been extending his researches into the declined it, whereupon he settled here the districts of the Gobi immediately adjoining Hwanyas who had been dispossessed by western China; and here his researches, the Hiung Nu of the former homes. It though not to the ethnologist likely to be has often been a subject of wonder why the of as great importance as those further west, ancient travellers in Central Asia going west from Shacheo or Tunhwang, instead of proceeding due west, made a detour far north by way of Kuamil whence they pro ceede l by Cherchen to the west. The explanation is to be found in this former. great extension of Lop, which in the early widdle ages seemed to have for a time at least, blocked the southern road. When the road was re-opened the desert was found to have so far advanced that few travellers ventured on making the journey. Up to the time of the Wei Shu, where the way stations are mentioned, the lines of information derivable on the subject rather military works established by the Han followers. For his age-the earlier part | suffered to fall into decay, and the sandy ; desert made rapid advances, so that with the rise of Mohammedani m and the decay of the Buddhist monasteries that had flourished under the rule of the earlier Wei sovereigns, the whole of these countries became a howling desert.

Here history repeats itself. In our own times the savage Tso T'sungt'ang was sent under the present regency to put lown the Mohammedan rising which had taken place as a sequence to the rule of the Amir Yakub in Kashgar. Too's sole idea of repression was extermination, and the e tire country was devastated, and the inhabitants; men, women, and children, ruthlessly massacred Tso was indeed temporarily successful: he made a howling wilderness of the cases that period of the sincteenth century become an stored to cultivation. Such is the story of Eastern Turkestan, which we are now, after the explorations of Dr. Stein, beginning to comprehend. A much wiser course in the interests of humanity at large would have been to have listened to the prayers of YAKUB BEG, and assisted him in the founding of his kingdon; but through a mistaken policy of supporting China on every occasion, whether right or wrong, we have aided in the final ruin of Central Asia and weakened our own rule in India.

. The report comes from Hankow that during a conversation the other day at Wuchang BRITISH MILITARY APPOINTbetween a cerisin Consul and H.E. Chao Erheen, Viceroy of the Hukuang provinces, the former is credited with a suggestion to the Viceroy that, as the people of Chekiang are opposed to a foreign loan for the Socchow, Hangehow and Ningpo Railway, it would be a good idea for the Imperial Government to take it up for its own use." "Yes," replied the Viceroy, "then the lenders will be asking for privileges and benefits in consideration

A very touching instance of the devotion of an old native officer to his "sahib" comes from India. When recently the news reached him that his old commanding officer-Major-General J. W. 1 ounghusband -- was dead, this native officer, whose name is Ibrahim Khao, of Mardan, was in perfect health, though 76. Taking the letter containing the sad news to the Mosque, he laid it on the ground before him, and said. "God, I am too old that I should stand this shock, take me also that I may again serve my old master!" From that day he just sank away, and a few weeks after died, happily and peacefully, saying, "I go to serve my General Sahib in Heaven.

Herr Woolfling, formerly the Archduke Leopold of Austria, who renounced all his titles in order to marry Fraulein Adamovies, the the garrison and worships at Lisbon singer, from whom he subsequently separated, has married again. Herr Woelfling is the brother of the ex-Crown Princess of Saxony who eloped with the tutor Giron from the Dresden Court, and recently married in London the Italian pianist, Signor Toselli. The ex. Archduke's bride on this occasion is Finalein Maria Magdalena Ritter, a woman twenty-five years old and of humble origin. The ceremony took place at Zurich, Herr Woelfling, a lawyer, two men friends, and the bride and her two sisters going in company to the town hall where the marriage took place. There was no religious ceremony.

Count Z ppelin denies the report that the German Government has bought his airship. What the Government has done is to buy the building wherein the airship is housed, refund ing by this means the money Count Zeppelin spent on it, and providing him with ready money wherewith to continue his present trials Moreover, the Government has ordered from the Count a new airship of considerably greater capacity then the present one. The new sirship will be capable of carrying a crew of 18, and it will be driven by a motor of 285 b.p. The trial at Friedrichshafen on zeptember 8 of the Count's present airship was of a most successful character. It was carried out in the presence of the German Crown Prince, the King of Würtemberg, and the Archduke Franz Salvator. The military airship made another successful excursion over Berlin next day, exciting co siderable curiosity among the people in the streets.

From the Suez Canal returns it appears that there has been a dicrease of 57,009 tons last year, as compared with 1905, in the tonnage of British vessels, which amounted to 8833,929 tons in 1904, 8,356,940 tons in 19.5, and 8,299,931 tons in 1906. During the same period, the tonnage of German vessels has increased from 1,969,561 tons in 1994 to 2,113,484 tons in 1905, and to 2,155,552 tons in 1906. The percentage of the British vessels and their net tonnage decreased in 1906, being 5 1.7 | tions. and 61.7 respectively, as against 63.4 and 63.6 in 1905, and 63.2 and 65.9 in 1904. The percentage of German vessels and their net tonnage was 14.8 and 16.0 repectively, as compared with 14.6 and 16.1 in 1905, and 12.8 and 14.7 in 1904, while the percentage of net tonnage of the other maritime nations using the Canal in 1906 remained practically stationary as compared with the preceding year.

Belgian commercial circles are commenting On Saturday afternoon a lukong arrested a upon a statement made by the "Külnische native in Centre Street who was under the Zeitung," and believed to have been made by influence of liquor. Tsoi Hougepo brought action against the Tung Yu firm to recover $788.40 due for goods sold and delivered.

Mr. O. D. Thomson, who appeared for the plaintiff, said the defendant firm carried on business at Tungsha village in the Fukien Province. On November 2nd a junk arrived here from that village with a quantity of cargo consigned to the plaintiff. In the course of a conversation with the junk owner the plaintiff learned that there were goods on board consigned by the defendant firm, who sent a man in charge of them. The name of that man was the same as the present claimant As the defend nis owed the plaintiff money he issued a writ of foreign attachment, and notice of the claim was not given notil twelve days after the writ had been delivered.

His Lordship delivered judgment for plaintiff on the writ, and then an issue was tried to decide who was the owner of the property seized, Mr. H. K. Holmes appearing for the claiment who, he said, was a trader in Hongkong and had his goods shipped to this port by the same junk as the plaintiff.

After hearing the evidence, His Lordship gave judgment for the claimant, with costs.

The Sergeant stated that while in the police launch he saw defendant's launch proceeding from east to west in the fairway. He was blowing his whistle and waving a lantern from his launch signalling to the Hong Man I, which ship was coming in. The signal was answered from the latter. Witness stopped the defendant and asked why he was blowing his whistle, and the latter replied that there were lot of sampans in his way. Afterwards he asked witness to give him another chance and say nothing about it. The Sergeant looked for sampans with a glass, but could see none.

His Worship imposed a fige of $20, the alternative being six weeks' hard labour.

REVIEW.

Over Sea Britain, by E. F. KNIGHT. LONDON: John Murray, 6s.

This is the first volume-a second being promised—of a descriptive record of geography, the historical, ethnological, and political development, and the economical resources, of the British empire. It deals with "the nearer empire": the British possessions in the Mediterranean, Africa, and America. It is embellished with a number of excellent, up-to-date maps, showing rainfall, temperature, and vegetation charts. If the second volume dealing with Asia and Oceania, turn out as good as the present instalment, it will be regarded as a very valuable standard work. It is interest. ingly arranged and lucidly written, and the collation of geography and history in this form makes it as easy to read as a novel. It is thoroughly Imperial stic in tone, slmost smacking of Joseph Chamberlain in fact, and in parts its politics may not meet the approval of all readers. The author takes, for instance, a very kindly view of the various chartered companies. To them the British Empire undoubtedly owes a great deal, but there are people who will gasp altruistic as the author thinks; to be told, for example, that they were "ever showing themselves ready to forego immediate profits, rather than shirk the high responsibilities imposed upon them. The history of Africa is absorbingly interesting, and one is surprized to find how much of it was either unknown to one or forgotten, considering that it is all covered by one's lifetime. We have no space to quote extensively, but in the circumstances we cannot miss the local interest of the two following passages:

[p. 140.] "In Nigeria, as in our other recently acquired tropical possessions, able administrators have been forthcoming to direct imperial expansion. Sir Frederick Lugard, first as servant of the Royal Niger Company and the negotiator of treaties with the chiefs of the Hinterland, and later as High Commissioner of Northern Nigeria under the Imperial Government, did as useful work here as in that other country, Uganda, which is so intimately connected with his name."

[p. 147.] "On the conclusion of the Anglo-German Agreement of 1890, Captain, now General Sir Frederick, Lugard, who as pioneer and administrator has done so much good service in Africa, led an expedition into Uganda, entered into a treaty with the king, settled so far as was possible the dispute between the three religious factions, enlisted into the Company's service the Sudanese who had been left on the shores of Lake Albert Nyanza by Emin Pasha, defeated the savage King of Unyoro, erected obligatory arbitration without any restriction. forts and garrisoned them, and firmly established the Company's influence up to the westermost limits of what is now the Uganda Protectorate.

How tame must Hongkong seem to a man who has done all that. This book, which we honestly and warmly recommend to all classes of readers and students, tells of the exploits of many other such makers of empire. And its descriptions of places are no less fasoinating. How many people could answer offhand a question about, say, Tristan D'Acunha? This is the largest of a group of small islands lying 1500 miles to the west of the Cape of Good Hope. It was discovered by the Portuguese in 1506 Nearly a century ago Britain put a garrison there, but withdrew it in twelvemonths. Now there is a community of about a hundred farmers, who breed live stock and grow vegetables, bartering fresh provisions to passing whalers and sealers for manufactured goods. Happy island of seven miles long! "There is no government beyond a patriarchal control exercised by the elder men, and there is no crime." At Taipo on Saturday the engineer of the Taipolaunch made the acquaintance of a native, and they had such a good time that the new fledged comrade said he would come to Hongkong with the engineer. The pendant was missed in the morning, and the engineer accused some of the craw of having stolen it. They all expressed their willingness to be searched, however, and when the engineer had examined them it was apparent that none of the crew had stolen the cash. Suspicion now fell on the engineer's new acquaintance, and he also expressed a desire to be searched, but refused to remove his left boot. The crew removed it for him, however, and there was found the missing cash. On appearing before Mr. C. D. This voyage is the first serious attempt made by Russian warships to explore the hitherto little known coastline of North. Eastern Siberia. The voyage lasted 106 days, and the actual length of coastline thus surveyed was 560 miles.

HAGUE CONFERENCE ENDS.

At the final sitting of the Peace Conference on October 18 M. de Nelidoff, the president, made a very long speech, surreying the work of the delegates. The task of the Conference, he said, was firstly to endeavour to prevent armed conflicts, and, secondly, to secure that, in the event of war breaking out, its effects should be as restricted as possible. For the first time an attempt had been made to codify the rules of naval warfare and the position of neutrals.

foundation for this codification had been laid. The conference had not sought to elaborate abstract theories or ideal solutions. The delegates had special instructions, based on their respective interests of the differe ent States were often diametrically opposed, the Gazette. The medal and the acts of braand the Conference sought to reconcile those interests with the theoretical exigencies of right and justice. The progress of the Conference as regards means for averting conflicts had been less considerable. Time and experience were lacking. The proposals for obligatory arbitration and the institution of an arbitral court of justice had met with insurmountable difficulties. On the other hand, the International Prize Court would stand out as the monument of this Conference, After pointing out that all established Stat's were represented, M. Nelidoff said :- " The Conference has worked its best; it is impossible to do everything. Those who come after us wil a little to read that their motives were so develop what we have b gun. The Conference, which will leave its mark in the history of humanity, has assumed a universal character by bringing together in the p th of progress delegates of the whole world.

M. Nelidoff proposed that a message expressing the gratitude of the onference should be sent to Queen Wilhelmins, and another to President R osevelt On the motion of the Dulch Foreign Minister.

a message was also sent to the Tsar. Sir Edward fry, speaking as deyon of the Conference, thanked the President and Vice-President. Speaking of the work done by the Conference. Sir Edward remarked that of all the proposals adopted by the Conference, the most remarkable was that providing for the establishment of an International Prize Court. because it was the first time in the history of the world that a really international court had been organised. He hoped that international law, which was a chaos, would little by little be established by The Hagus Court. Sir Edward concluded :- "Just one word more. We are about to separate. I feel sure that each one of ns will pray for the blessings of heaven on al the others and on their countries. Finally, bid you from the bottom of my heart, mindful of all the word means, Adieu. As the aged delegate finished his speech, his colleagues gave vent to their emotion by a regular outburst of applause. The final Act enumerates the fourteen conventions drafted by it for signature. It provides that these can be signed at any time before

June 30, 1908 The Act further declares that the Conference is unanimous in recognising the principle of obligatory arbitration, and in declaring that certain differences, especially those relating to the i terpretation of international conventional stipulations are capable of being submitted to The Conference confirms the resolution adopted by the Conference of 1899 regarding the limitation of military burdens, and seeing that military burdens have since that date considerably increased in almost all countries, the Conference declares it highly desirable tha the Governments should resume the serious. study of this question.

The Act next recommends the meeting of a third Conference after an interval similar to that between the first and second Conferences, and urges the preparation of its labours and proposes that a Preparatory Committee shall meet two years before the next Conference to prepare a programme and rules of procedure.

THE JAPANESE EMPEROR.

BUGGESTED VISIT TO EVECPE. In the course of a notable leading article on the Imperal birthday, the Ocaka Mainichi writes as follows (seconding to a Kobe Herald translation) :-Just after the Japan-China war, the Diet

voted that part of the indemni y should be contributed towards the expenditure of the Imperial Court as an expression of the national gratitude. A similar wish is now being entertained by the people. They desire to convey to His Mejesty in the most satisfactory way their gratitude for the Imperial efforts which resulted in the victories in the recent war. We therefore respectfully suggest that arrangement should be made for His Majesty to pay visits to various foreign Powers escorted by the warships Satsuma, Aki, Kurama, Tsukuba, and others which have been constructed Japan, and the Mikasa, which is so prominently identified with the late war, and accompanied by the Generals and A Imirals who distinguished themselves in that struggle. Such an action would, on the one hand, gratify the people of f reign countries who are desirous to personally see the Emperor, and on the other hand, i would fulfil the wish of the Japanese nation to express its gratitude to His Majesty. The visit of the Crown Prince to Soul greatly st engthened the relations between Japan and Korea, although he stayed there for only three days. If His Majesty paid a visit to Great Brit in, our Ally, and also visited Russia a d France, he countries with which our Empire has let ly entered into Agreements and some other foreign lands, it certain that the friendships between Japan and the se Powers would be wonderfully increased. If any Power entertained anspicious of Japan, those suspicion; would be at once dispelled by the Imperial action, and a further guarantee of th. p. acc of the Far East would be supplied. To His Majesty, also, it would be of much advantage to be able to observe the peoples and ousloms of countries which are very different from Japan. We consequently avail ourselves of the opportunity afforded by the Imperial birthday to respectfully auggest that the Emperor should pay visits abroad. In that event the Diet would have pleasure in immediately voting the necessary expenditure, and the whole nation would giadly do everything possible to prepare for His Majesty's journey.

Vehicles of all kinds will be able to adopt electricity as motive power by using the Edison accumulator, which will only have to be recharged at long intervals.

-Hitherto it has been impossible to store electricity in bulk without involving great weight and consequently reduced carrying capacity. Three years ago Mr. Edison succeeded in constructing an accumulator which dreve a motor-our for 150 miles on one charge, but it was cumbrons as well as costly.

Mr. Edison now claims that he has overcome all obstacles, and that motor-cars will soon be so cheap as to be within the reach of every man who can now afford to own a borse. "I have at last encoceded in placing the electric storage battery on an economical basie," said Mr. Edison. "I am now turning

HYPNOTISED HERSELF. STRANGE SCENE IN A HOS ITAL.

A remarkable case of a patient being rendered unconscious by the mere suggestion that an ansathetic was being administered has occurred at one of the London hospitals. A young woman went to the bospital to have five teeth extracted. The ansesthetic decided upon by the dental surgeon was ethyl oblor ide, and this was administered by the usual form of apparatus. An indiarubber cap is placed over the patient's mouth and nostrile, and connected with it is a bag into which a scaled cap-ule of ethyl chloride is introduced. By the turning of a serow from the outside the capsule is broken and the a mahetic liberated.

The screw was turned, and the patient went off gradually into the usual condition of insensibility. Five teeth were extracted, and the parient swoke without having felt any part of the operation.

Only when the young woman had left the room, and the postatus was being made ready for another patient, was it discovered that the capsule of ethyl chloride had by some mischance not been broken at all.

The condition of insensibility had been brought about by the self-hypnotism of the patient. The belief that an ansithetic was being administered was so strongly fixed in her mind that she had passed into insensibility entirely by hypnotic suggestion.

COMMERCIAL MORALITY IN JAPAN.

Much has been written about commercial n orality in Japan, and probably the "last word" will not have been said for many years to come on this very delicate topic. An experiment is now being made in Kobe which will attract the interest of both Japanese and foreign merchants in the open ports in this country. The experiment to which we refer is the publication of a little periodical entitled Commercial Merality, under the editorship of Mr. Une, who is connected with the Kobe Yushin Nipro. It is the object of Mr. Uno, we understand, to conduct a campaign against those merchants who are found to resort to dishonest questionable practices, and he invites foreigners and Japanese alike to inform him of any such action whih comes to their notice. Mr. Uno is of opinion that by giving publicity to these practices, and urging the merchants to improve the present standard of commercial morality, a much needed improvement will be brought about, and the ground of the present oft-heard complaints of breach of contract, short delivery, etc., will a radually be removed. It is evident however, that very great care must be exercised in dealing with the charges that are brought on i one side, and the defences made on the other. In reality the editor of such a publication would act as a judge without the advantage of having before him all the evidence, and much injustice might be done by taking up some particular matter on insufficient information and without a knowledge of all the facts.

From an editorial article in the first issue of Commercial Morality we quote the following:-" It is a well-known fact that the foreign trade of Japan has recently made gigantic bounds, the income from this source slone amounting to the great total of Y100,000,000 per annum. This is wholly attributable to the untiring exertions of merchants and the improvement of commercial morality. But, looking backward, if we think of the present standing of our commercial morality we cannot but feel that it is still for from satisfactory, and we can only admit that the growth of commercial morality among the Japanese nation as a whole is as yet very slow and moreover inconsiderable, to the gread hindrance of a further increase of foreign commerce and trade.

"That commercial mo: ality should be strictly maintained and improved for the sake of the country has hither to been publicly expressed and and urged by all sections of the community, but the result of this demonstration has, so far, proved very unsatisfactory. There still exists Hart) of the Imperial Maritime Customs to reputation and future profits, but creates a transport all Japanese mails from Peking to great obstacle to the development of the foreign Mukden, and vice versa, through the Imperial trade of Japan. All this is admitted by men of keen observation, and we can therefore corclude that the development of foreign trade and the prosperity of a country's commerce

In that capacity I had the use of nearly all the preparations the Pharmacopæin prescribes, but througheachstage of the disease I did not consult any medical officer, but treated myself with preparations of mercury and sarsaparilla for about nine months, but the eruption continued for years, and eventually left a scaly surface surrounding both limbs. In 1905 I tried -- 's Remedies which seemed to remove the cruption, but at the beginning of the present year an eczematous eruption appeared, then seeing a Cuticura advertisement I decided to give a trial to the Cuticura Remedies, of which I needed but five supplies. After the first week I found great relief and I have been quite free from any irritation since, although I continued the treatment for ten weeks in all. There is only a faint discoloration left. and I consider that Cuticura Remedies have done more towards curing the troublesome disease of which I suffered so long than all the other remedies put together and I recommend them to all my friends. PRINCE EULENBURG AND THE COURT SCANDALS. -

END OF THE TRIAL.

The political effects of the libel action brought by General Count von Moltke against Herr Maximilian Harden, the Berlin editor, can scarcely be over-estimated. The revelations of the trial have created the profoundest sensation throughout Germany. The Enlenburg clique, which surrounded the Emperor. is shown to have exercised the most been proved as to my client being associated dangerous influence on the throne. . It secured the dismissal of Prince-Bismarck from the Chancellorship, and followed this triumph with the downfall of his successor, Count Capricl.

Herr Harden is looked upon as a great national Moltke. I affirm that there is not the slightest benefactor, while Count von Moltke was pursued proof that my client has misconducted him. by no angry mob which pelted him with stones. self. I affirm that Count Moltke has behaved The fe ling is almost unanimous, as Herr honourably." Harden himself claimed, in addressing the court, that he has really conferred a great defence. public service in exposing the failings of the members of the "camarille," thereby bringing with his fluger, Dr. Bernstein thundered: about their dismissal from the high influential "Either Count Kuno von Mcltke, ex-Compositions which they formerly occupied with dis- mandant of Berlin and excellency, has told a astrous results for Germany.

immediate environment of the throne. The disclosures made by witnes es who had taken the oath to tell the truth and nothing but the truth, must have been a terrible blow to the Kaisar who was obliged to read, in common with millions of his subjects, that the men who were gathered around the throne, men whom he honoured with his personal friendship, and on whom he relied as sagacious political advisors, were not only crimina's, but crimina's from that!" of an abhorrently vicious type.

His own kinsmen, his chosen friends, w com be addressed in the second person singular ("du"), noblemen in whom he placed almost unlimited confidence, were shown to be men of abnormally vicious tendencies, who year after year systematically violated cartain paragraphs of the German criminal code until Herr Harden exposed their real character in the "Zukunft. Perhaps the most striking testimony given during this sensational trial was the sworn statement of a former trooper in a crack cavalry regiment that on the occasion of a great military review a certain aristocratic officer who s stated to have belonged to the "camarilla" actually pointed out to the Emperor the paths of vice as a man worthy of the Emperor's

All these revelations must have been a painful disillusionment for the Emperor, for they undoubtedly revealed grave daugers of the semi-absolutism now existing in Germany. If absolutism were ever excusable, it would be in contemporary Germany. If any monarch were capable of practising benevolent despotism for the benefit of his subjects, it would be William II., who is a man of versatile genius and lefty char oter, and whose private life and conduct are above repreach.

Nevertheless in spite of the Emperor's. brilliant intellectial qualities, and notwithstanding his good intentions, which his bitterest critics have never ventured to question, benevolent despotism as practised in Germany has proved a disastrous failure, inasmuch as it enabled vicious criminals to stand between the monarch and the nation and to exert a baneful influence on the government of the German

How baneful this inflaence was Herr Harden showed in his elequent address to the court. Prince Enlenburg contributed largely to the downfall of Prince Bismarck, the greatest avoided the glaring errors in subsequent German foreign policy if he had remained in office. Prince Enlenburg brought about the down on Prince Eulenburg in his memoirs, published a year age, which attracted so much attention.

Princess Buelow implored Prince Eulenburg when the Emperor expresses an opinion. Lecomte, was frequently enabled to and the French Government valuable information obtained indirectly from the Emperor through the Emperor's circle of chosen friends and advisers, beaded by Prince Eulenburg.

Herr Harden's declaration that there have been two conflicting German policies-one conducted by the Emperor, the other by Prince Bue ow-will hardly surprise any one who have followed Germany's erratic course of action during the Morocco crisis, but he revealed more clearly than ever has been done before the grave dangers which must inevitably arise when irresponsible advisers behind the scenes at Court exercise more influence on the policy of the country than the responsible Ministers and elected representatives of the nation.

Prince Eulenburg and his circle of friends, especially Count Kune von Moltke, created an unhealthy atmosphere around the Emperor for nineteen years until Herr Harden exposed their real character.

They were sycophants who flattered the Emperor and never contradicted him, telling him pleasant untruths rather than unpleasant truths, and encouraged him in the belief that he was destined to rule absolutely in Germany | FROM 18T JANUARY, 1864 TO 31ST DECEMBER by Divice inspiration

Dr. von Gordon in his speech for the prosecution said :--"There is no German present at this trial who has not heard with the deepest shame of the occurrences at the Villa Adler. This feeling is increased by the knowledge that the leaders in these orgies were the first in the land and members of a regiment which is the elite of the Prussian army.

"Must we fear that these practices will be spread by the soldiers throughout the land? All Germans, however, including my client, have been disgusted by these revelations, which is a proof that the kernel of the German people has nothing to do with these obscenities.

Otherwise the most despicable regime of favourites will win the upper hand in the German empire, and Heaven preserve us

How the Emperor came to be enlightened concerning the matters under investigation was explained by an extract read by Dr. Bernstein in the course of the long speech which was interrupted by the return of the police official Herr von Treskow and the witness Vollart from their unsuccessful mission to Prince Eulenburg's residence. The passage quoted was from a periodical devoted to psychological affairs and edited by Dr. Magnus Hirschfeld, and ran as "One day, as a group of officers in the Club were discussing these matters, one of them observed, 'This is nothing out of the common; there are a whole lot of persons in high positions with similar inclinations, as one could see by reading the last number of the Zukurft. The Crown Prince, who chanced to hear the part of the conversation, demanded an explanation. He sent for the numbers of the Zukunft concerned, and asked General Count Hilsen-Hasseler if it were not necessary that the latter should report the matter to the Emperor General Hülsen-Haeseler refused to do this, on the plea that Prince Philip Eulenburg was not a military officer, but he persuaded the Crown Prince himself to undertake the enlightenment of the Emperor. The Prince at first remonstrated, saying he felt too young for such a mission, but flusly, on May 5, he mentioned the occurrences and the articles to the Emperor. The Emperor immediately sent for General Hülsen-Hasseler, Dr. vin Betumann-Hollweg, Minister of the Interior, and Dr. von Borries, the Berlin Prefect of Police, and a conference of several hours' duration took place, with the result that Count William Hohenau, Count Kuno von Moltke, and Prince Philip Eulenburg were dismissed from their positions. in his resignation before the catastrophe." Dr. Bernstein proceeded: "It is here stated that the plaintiff lost his position owing to charges of perverted inclination. During this trial the plaintiff has declared that the loss of German statesman, who would probably have his post had nothing to do with these charges.
